The Free Media Help Line (FMHL) operates under auspices of the BH Journalists Association as local institution and as the assistance to journalists in performing their daily work, as well as in protection of their rights and freedoms.

The idea to establish the FMHL initiated from the Independent Media Commission (today's RAK) came in January 1999. Same year FMHL was taken over by the OSCE where it stayed, as a part of the Media Department, till the end of 2001. With the closing of this Department, it continues to operate and develop within the OHR. IN the priod from 2003. to 2004. there was a successful transfer of the Free Media Help Line under BH Journalist Assciaiton spices of local institution as a service for free legal help for journalists and media outlets, as well as the service that provides professional support to journalists and media.

Acting within the Association of BIH Journalists, FMHL is the only institution in BIH, which systematically acts as the protector of freedom of media and journalists rights and which publicly reacts on each attempt of limitation of public speech freedom. In the period between 1999 and 2008, FMHL registered over 2.000 cases of attempts to limit freedom of media, to put pressure on journalists and media houses and attempts to violate journalists' rights.
